WARRUWI MEN'S YARNING SPACE

Recently, West Arnhem Regional Council staff in Warruwi including Rupert and Jonah from Community Safety team, Council Services Manager Matthew Griffiths and Wellbeing Services Coordinator Geri Narul worked with five youth as part of the Men's Yarning Space.

We created conversations around social media and how it impacts us on a daily basis in Warruwi.

The youth really got involved in the conversation on how destructive social media can be but also talked about the positives it brings.

Any young men in Warruwi who wish to be a part of the Men's Yarning Space can speak to Wellbeing Services Coordinator, Geri or Senior Community Safety Officer, Jonah Walamaka.

"Building positive relationships, providing access to health awareness, traditional healing methods and therapies.."

Jonah is in the office from Monday, Wednesday and Thursdays from 10am.

"The Men's Yarning Space is facilitated by Community Safety/Night Patrol, creating a safe space for our young men in Warruwi.

Community Safety/Night Patrol will work collaboratively with local and external health service providers as a prevention strategy through building positive relationships, providing access to health awareness, traditional healing methods and therapies."

If you have any further questions, please come see Geri at the WARC office Monday to Friday.

The Men's Yarning Space in Warruwi takes place every Thursday from 10am to 2pm.

PROTECT YOURSELF AGAINST MELIOIDOSIS

Top End residents and visitors are being urged to take extra precaution to avoid melioidosis ahead of the wet season.

Melioidosis is a disease caused by the bacterium, Burkholderia pseudomallei, found in tropical soil and water.

"People are more likely to come in contact with the bacteria during the wet season, when bacteria increase after heavy rains and concentrate in the soil surface layers," said Royal Darwin Hospital and Menzies Professor of Medicine, Bart Currie.

"On average around 50 cases of melioidosis are reported in the Northern Territory each year, with the vast majority of those diagnosed between November and April," said Professor Currie.

Case numbers in the most recent wet season (1 October 2022 to 30 April 2023) were higher than usual, with NT Health recording 80 cases of melioidosis and six deaths in the Northern Territory.

Melioidosis bacteria can enter the body through cuts and sores. When it's wet and windy, the bacteria can be blown around in the air and inhaled through dust and droplets.

"Melioidosis most often causes lung infections and can also affect various other parts of the body, including causing skin sores that don't easily heal," said Professor Currie.

"If left untreated, melioidosis can lead to severe pneumonia and blood poisoning, with around 10 per cent of infections leading to death."

Symptoms usually develop within one to three weeks of a person being exposed to the bacteria, but in some cases, illness may not occur until several months or years after the initial infection.

The first sign of melioidosis is commonly a chest infection. Other symptoms can include:

- fever and sweats
- headache
- confusion
- difficulty passing urine for men
- joint pain or swelling
- skin sores that don't heal.

People are advised to seek medical attention early to ensure prompt diagnosis and treatment. Treatment requires hospital admission and intensive antibiotic therapy. People with underlying health conditions that lower immunity are more likely to develop melioidosis. This includes those with diabetes, heavy alcohol intake, kidney and lung disease, people who take immune suppression therapy medications, cancer, and advanced age.

To avoid melioidosis, the following precautions should be taken:

- wear covered waterproof footwear when outdoors
- wear gloves while working in the garden or a soil-based environment
- wash then cover sores and abrasions with waterproof dressings
- wear a face mask while using high pressure hoses around soil and paths
- stay indoors during heavy wind and rain
- seek medical attention early.

Melioidosis does not usually spread from one person to another or from animals to humans.

More information about melioidosis is available at <https://nt.gov.au/wellbeing/health-conditions-treatments/bacterial/melioidosis>

GIVING ALL MUMS A VOICE IN WARRUWI

West Arnhem Regional Council (WARC) along with Families as First Teachers (FaFT) hosted a pancake breakfast for our mums in Warruwi.

"Give a voice for mums by providing an opportunity for parents to ask questions.."

The objectives of the activity was to give a voice for mums by providing an opportunity for parents to ask questions and voice their needs.

It was also a chance for WARC's Wellbeing Services Coordinator Geri Narul to share an update on Council's activities and services including the crèche, employment and after-school care etc.

There was a great turn out and we look forward to the next gathering.

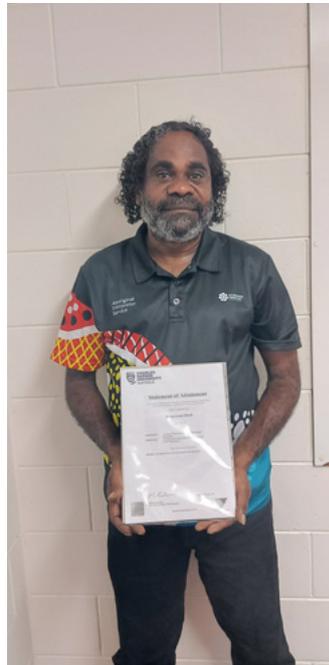

Please join us next one under the mango trees (behind the Women's Centre) for some pancakes and a cuppa.

NEW ROAD SIGNAGE INCREASES COMMUNITY SAFETY MANINGRIDA

West Arnhem Regional Council's works crew in Maningrida have been busy installing new road signage about the community over the last week. Signs covering speed limits, speed hump warnings, pedestrian crossing, floodway, first aid, give way, stop and forklift warning have installed to improve public safety.

WARC STAFF PARTICIPATES IN PLANT AND MACHINERY TRAINING WITH CDU

West Arnhem Regional Council works crews continue to benefit from great training activities. Ten members from our Works Crews in Gunbalanya and Warruwi participated in this training opportunity delivered by CDU in Gunbalanya.

They learned how to safely operate excavators and skid steer loaders and also how to undertake a wider range of construction tasks.

Another group of employees completed a similar training program in Jabiru earlier this year.

Misman Kris, Senior Works Officer in Warruwi, said this program has helped him to "gain more confidence to operate the equipment and to share his knowledge with his team when he returns to community".

JABIRU PUBLIC LIBRARY NEW BOOK

Gundjeihmi Aboriginal Corporation has kindly donated this book to our library for all to enjoy. Happy Reading.

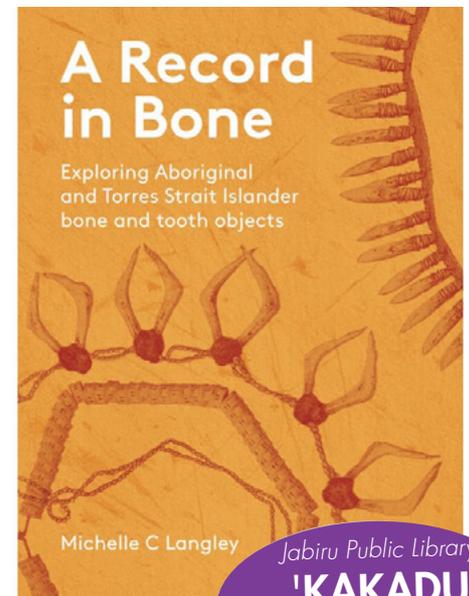

Bone and tooth tools and ornaments have been made by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples for at least 46,000 years, using some of the oldest technologies in the world. Despite their beauty, sophistication and ubiquity, archaeologists and other researchers have overwhelmingly focused on the stone artefacts of Australia. Consequently, until now, we have known little of how bone and tooth objects were made and used, or how individual communities differed in how they worked with the material.

A Record in Bone brings together into one volume the scattered and sometimes difficult-to-find research and findings of more than a century. It reveals Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' innovative bone, tooth, quill and claw industries, including the extensive use of ornamentation, the bone points and hooks which have been central to fishing in Australia for about 5000 years, and much more.

This volume is a perfect companion to A Record in Stone: The study of Australia's flaked stone artefacts (ASP 2007). It will be an invaluable reference text for professionals in, and students of, archaeology, anthropology, Indigenous studies and museum studies. It is also an easy-to-read introduction for anyone interested in Australia's past, and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander culture and technology.

NEXT GENERATION OF ABORIGINAL LEADERS

Eighteen Aboriginal leaders from across the Territory addressed the highest level of Government at a special Cabinet meeting on Tuesday 31 October 2023.

The Aboriginal leaders, eight women and ten men, offered advice and guidance on policies, projects and initiatives that impact on Aboriginal Territorians and remote communities.

The Cabinet presentation completed a journey that commenced in March 2023 and involved learning about the government, its policies, programs and mode of operation.

West Arnhem Regional Council Youth, Sport and Recreation Officer in Jabiru, Leah Narul Holt was a participant in the First Circles Leadership Program. Leah started the program when she was pregnant and then took her new baby to all of the three workshops.

West Arnhem Regional Council congratulates Leah on her achievements with the program.

Members have attended workshops across the Territory, as well as the NT Aboriginal Leadership and Governance Forum in Alice Springs.

Participants also learnt how to produce and present effective presentations, and useful techniques to use when having difficult conversations in order to influence change.

The First Circles Leadership Program is an NT Government flagship program aimed to help identify, mentor and support Aboriginal emerging leaders from remote communities across the Northern Territory.

The program is calling for expressions of interest from Aboriginal Territorians that want to be part of the program in 2024. Applications close on 30 November 2023.

For more information visit aboriginalaffairs.nt.gov.au Minister for Local Decision Making, Selena Uiibo said, "As a First Circles member in 2015, I valued the opportunity the program presented in focusing on solutions in my remote community. It is important as Government that we support people in regional and remote communities to enhance their leadership skills.

"First Circles is a program for emerging community leaders to share their stories and ideas and to work directly with the government to create change at a local level and have their voices heard."

PREPARE FOR THIS CYCLONE SEASON

As we move into cyclone season there are things we can all do to prepare and keep yourself, your family and your home safe.

A few helpful tips from NT Police, Fire & Emergency Services <https://secure.nt.gov.au/>

- Trim tree tops and branches well clear of your home
- Clear your property of loose material that could blow about and possibly cause injury or damage during extreme winds - In case of a storm surge/tidal warning, or other flooding, know your nearest safe high ground and the safest access route to it

- Prepare an emergency kit that can sustain every member of the household for at least 72 hours.

CAHILL'S CROSSING GETS MOBILE PHONE SERVICE

The Territory Labor Government's $28 million partnership with Telstra continues to bring better telecommunications to the bush.

The latest site to receive services under the Remote Telecommunications Co-investment Program (RTCP) is Cahills Crossing in Kakadu National Park, which now has a 4G mobile service.

Cahills Crossing on the East Alligator River is one of Australia's most famous causeways, attracting visitors from near and far due to the large numbers of estuarine crocodiles gathering around the Crossing.

Telstra and the Northern Territory Government have each committed $14 million over four years towards improved telecommunications infrastructure across the Territory.

Residents, businesses, tourists and Territorians on the road all benefit from the upgrades that provide modern infrastructure for mobile phones and broadband services.

Since 2009, Northern Territory Government remote telecommunications co-investment programs have delivered benefits to more than 40,000 Territorians across 144 locations, including 69 remote communities, 17 town camps and 13 roadside locations.

The $28 million RTCP with Telstra has provided mobile coverage at Laramba, Larrimah, Tilmouth Well, Top Springs Roadhouse, Wutunugurra and Yuelamu, and fixed line broadband and mobile services for Willowra.

This follows upgrades for mobiles and broadband services in Wurrumiyanga, Pirlangimpi and Milikapiti on the Tiwi Islands, completed in 2021. These communities now have service quality on par with Darwin.

Minister for Corporate and Digital Development Selena Uibo said, "It's fantastic that locals and visitors using Telstra can now make and receive calls from Cahills Crossing, Willowra, Laramba, Wutunugurra, Yuelamu and more.

"The Territory Labor Government is committed to improving telecommunications in the bush. Modern digital connectivity is critical to the Territory economy, social development and bridging the digital divide.

"The NT Government highly values its partnerships with Telstra, which are delivering infrastructure to connect more remote Territorians."

Member for Arafura Manuel Brown said, "I drove through Cahills Crossing on Wednesday and we had mobile service. This mobile service will help residents stay connected and assist with making the crossing safer.

"I'm proud the Territory Labor Government is committed to improving communication in the bush and is working hard to close the digital divide for Aboriginal Territorians."

5 DIMENSIONS OF RECONCILIATION

Reconciliation Australia's vision of reconciliation is based and measured on five dimensions: historical acceptance; race relations; equality and equity; institutional integrity and unity.

These five dimensions do not exist in isolation, but are interrelated. Reconciliation cannot be seen as a single issue or agenda; the contemporary definition of reconciliation must weave all of these threads together. For example, greater historical acceptance of the wrongs done to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples can lead to improved race relations, which in turn leads to greater equality and equity.

SALTY URBAN MYTHS ABOUT CROCODILES

It's been a warm dry season across much of the Northern Territory this year. Limited early wet season rainfall means that in some areas, water levels in creeks and rivers are much lower than they would normally be.

There is nothing more tempting on a warm day than sitting down by the river, listening to the rapids and watching black-bream scudding away from the banks.

But don't be fooled, saltwater crocs move around year round! There are many different urban myths going around about salties, many things that people believe are true, but are really just stories that people tell one another.

Some stories might be that crocodiles don't like swimming in shallow water, or that they can be avoided by swimming during the day or in zig zag patterns. Some stories say that a saltwater crocodile is frightened away if you throw a rock into the water and some people think that they can be safe if they have someone watching out for crocodiles, or if they are swimming in clear water.

Please remember that none of these things are true. In fact believing these things may lead to people not behaving in the right way in croc country and getting attacked or even killed by saltwater crocodiles as a result.

Salties are perfectly camouflaged ambush predators and can be almost invisible against the stones and mud of the river bed. They lie in wait, submerged just under the water and will leap up out of shallow water to grab animals that come down to drink from the water's edge. Salties hunt wherever there are fish or other prey and this includes in shallow water, around rock bars and at boat ramps, and they will hunt day or night, whenever they are hungry.

Always Be Crocwise. Camp at least fifty metres away from the water's edge, and stand at least five metres from the water at all times.
